That Daily Hunt For Trouble

Ninety Percent of Men Start Out in the Morning Fearing Result of Day's Work.
By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

"A CROWD of troubles passed him by. As he with courage waited. He said: 'Where do your troubles fly, When you are thus belated?'"

"We go," they said, "to those who mope, Who look on life dejected. Who weakly say goodbye to hope, We go, where we're expected."

If every man started off in the morning wearing a tag attached to his mental condition, the present would wear a tag like this: "Looking for trouble."

And every one finds what he seeks. If you want authority for this, look in the Bible.

Consciously, or unconsciously, most of us expect to find trouble. The man who expects to find trouble, will find it.

We are not sure about the success of the business deal launched yesterday. Johnny's fear is more inflated, and we fear disphoria. If there is no small something wrong, and if there is mail, we decide before opening it that it will contain bad news.

We hope everything will be all right of course. But we fear it won't, and that fear is the invitation to trouble.

It is as if a sheep herder feared the wolves would break in, and then let down the bars of the fold to show how easily they could get in and devour his sheep. Of course, he hopes they won't break in, but with the bars off like that, it would be impossible to keep them out.

Don't you see? And always waits about Luck. And the wolves, seeing the bars down, and knowing that they are expected, break in, and the sheep are slaughtered.

The sheep herder waits about his luck. He always knew, he complains, that some day just this disaster would happen.

BRING OPIUM CASE TO A CONCLUSION

Charge of Long Standing Is Dismissed—Court News at Tombstone.

Tombstone, Ariz., Feb. 6.—Business for the new court officials continues to accumulate in the clerk's office in the filing of new actions that will have to be heard by the superior court. During the past few days the following cases have been filed: Frank Payla as administrator of the estate of Fred Carls, has brought suit against C. L. Cummings and L. E. Woolery for the sum of $1500 alleged to be due on a promissory note. A. S. Sherr, of Douglas, has brought an action for divorce against Georgia L. Sherr on the grounds of desertion. He asks a decree of divorce and a division of the community property valued at about $2500. Louis Hensel, of Douglas, has brought suit against the Leadville Townsite Leasing and Mining company, William Kline and the Bank of Douglas to quiet title to lots 13 and 14 in block 64 of the townsite of Douglas.

An order was entered on the United States criminal docket today dismissing the cases entitled United States vs. Thomas Andrews and George Poole. Andrews and Poole, it will be remembered, were arrested some time ago on a grain at Yuma, where they were occupying a drawing room and when they were arrested some $2000 worth of opium was found in their possession. Andrews served a term in California and was then brought here to answer an indictment that had been returned against him. He was fined $100.

Dinners and Luncheons

Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Coles entertained a few of their friends at a beautifully appointed three course Mexican dinner, at their home, 714 Magoffin street, Monday evening at seven o'clock. The guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fox, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Otis Coles. The large dining table was exquisite in its decorations of brilliant red carnations; tall crystal candlesticks with their red shades and red candles cast soft and ruddy glows over the scene. Fancy Mexican baskets holding tasty Mexican candies were placed at intervals on the table. Suggestive of the Mexican work of art were the small feathered cards used as place cards. Covers were laid for 22 guests. A stringed orchestra furnished music throughout the dinner. Dancing followed the dinner.

El Pasoans Returning

Dr. and Mrs. A. R. Klein have returned from a lengthy visit with relatives in Muscatine, Ia., and are again at home at 1314 Montana street.

Miss Anne Lee Gaines returned from a trip of several weeks to Houston and San Antonio, Tex., on Saturday evening.

Dances

The Wolverine Dancing club held a meeting Thursday evening at the home of Miss Maurine Carter, 1498 North Oregon street. After the regular business meeting, the evening was spent in dancing. Refreshments, consisting of an ice course, were served. Only club members were present.

The Wolverine Dancing club will entertain with a dance at the K. of C. hall on Saturday evening. The invitation committee is Misses Ruth Forsyth, Mary Weeks and Mattie Hoover.

El Pasoans Away

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Tooley left today for a six week trip to New York City.

Miss Jane Lindsey leaves Monday for San Diego for an indefinite visit to her sister-in-law, Mrs. E. R. Lindsey.

Receptions

Mrs. H. J. Simmons will entertain with an "at home" at the Toilet club on February 13, from 3 until 5 o'clock. The invitations are not yet out.

Your shoemaker and his trade-mark

This mark is on every McELWAIN SHOE

THERE is a shoemaker in Boston who makes ten million pairs of shoes a year for men and boys. He puts this mark on his shoes so that you can recognize the best shoes wherever you buy.

This mark upon a pair of shoes tells a story longer than we can get into a single advertisement. It tells in the shortest possible way that the pair of shoes which carries it, is good because of the system that is behind it; because it is the product of a shoe factory so highly specialized that every part of the shoe is made in the best possible way, in the best possible factory for the purpose. It means a shoe-made in the right way, from the right materials, by the most skillful workmen, so that you get all the benefit, and pay for no loss, no waste, no uncertainty.

It means that that shoe is the best shoe for anybody; is the best shoe for you. It means that having tried and worn it to your satisfaction, as millions of people have, the trade-mark gives you a name by which you can ask for your next pair of shoes, to obtain a pair equally good.

This is only a part of the story that the McElwain trade-mark tells, but every part of that story is interesting, and every part of it is important to you. We are going to tell the rest of the story in this paper from time to time.

If your shoe dealer sells the McElwain Shoe, he knows the rest of the story, and he will tell it to you or sell you the McElwain Shoe, or both.

Little Editorials By Herald Readers

WHO CAN ANSWER THIS?

Editor El Paso Herald:

Shortly prior to the world's fair in Chicago in 1893 this government invited the Spanish government to participate in the fair, and that government sent a representative of the lineal descendant of Columbus by the courtesy (I believe Cordova) but to whom he had never been legally married, and in order that the representative might be legitimate a ceremony of some kind, either by the church or state, was performed marrying Columbus to this party (Cousins Cordova) thus making the heir legitimate.

Please advise if such ceremony was performed and if so what was the nature of it and whether by church or state or both.

Wm. Harris.

FROM THE COUNTY ATTORNEY.

El Paso, Feb. 6.

Editor El Paso Herald:

In the Herald of last Friday the following interrogatory is propounded to me by J. L. Campbell:

"In your opinion would it be proper for your law partner to act as counsel for a defendant in a case which you should or might have to prosecute? Those such a relation exist or has it existed?"

The asking of these questions by Mr.

Campbell impresses me as being a small piece of business on his part—a bit of petty malice—but I suppose that I must answer them or remain forever thereafter under suspicion.

The relationship to which Mr. Campbell refers does not exist between my law partner and myself, has not existed and will not exist.

I think it would be clearly unlawful for me to share in a fee which my law partner might collect for defending in a criminal case prosecuted by me. I think it would be improper and unethical for my law partner to defend a case prosecuted by me.

I think my law partner is defending one or two criminal cases in the district court. I have no connection with them and there is no community of interest between myself and my law partner in any criminal case, whether the defendant or prosecutor, and he has done both in that court.

I conducted the examining trials in the cases referred to. At the time I conducted these examining trials my law partner was not counsel either for or against any of the defendants. I think he has been tentatively retained for the defense in one of the cases. He told me that he expected to defend one of the cases when he came into court, and I had just come into court, and I think he looked over the testimony after it had been written down by me. He did not know at that time whether he would represent the defendant or not.

I cannot except when the district attorney or the special district attorney, as we now call it, is absent or disqualified. Should I by any chance be called on to prosecute a case in this court where my law partner represented the defendant, I would consider myself as disqualified in such case.

I think I have never intentionally or against legal ethics in any case that I have ever tried. I feel secure in this statement. I think this is a full and complete answer to Mr. Campbell's question.

Having answered Mr. Campbell's question I now take the liberty of propounding an interrogatory to him. He has indulged in what I consider to be an illegal criticism of my act in not prosecuting a man who had violated the liquor law, but who agreed to quit the business, etc. Now, will Mr. Campbell please state in the columns of the Herald whether he considers all violators of the penal laws of this state to be criminals? Does he believe that all persons who violate the penal laws of the state—all laws of which the county and district courts have jurisdiction—should be prosecuted of the nature and the character of the offense committed?

W. W. Bridgers.

GENERAL JAMES ALLEN WOULD EQUIP U. S. ARMY WITH 1,000 AEROPLANES

Wants Winged Service to Be Completed in Three Years' Time.

New York, N. Y., Feb. 4.—To equip the military branch of the United States with 1000 aeroplanes within the next three years is the plan of Gen. James Allen, chief of the United States signal corps, and if his request is granted he will immediately put in an order for the first delivery of these winged messengers.

"I am chief of the signal corps so long," he said. "The aeroplane was born and bred here and yet we have the most pitiful showing of any nation in the world. The next great war will be fought in the air. It will be a contest of grand tactics and the side with the largest and most competent aerial soldiers will win."

"We need the aeroplane section because we must be equipped with an adequate defence. To the south of us we have a fine large country which is coveted by a militant foreign nation. To the west of us we have possessions which are naturally in the path of development of another militant nation of famous fighters. In the natural course of events we are bound to defend our honor and our property—and we will need aeroplanes to do it."

"At the present day it has been demonstrated that inflammable bombs thrown from an aeroplane can set a town afire. Three pound bombs can smash a ship. For feet deep in the ground. The coast artillery, unless it is protected by torpedoes, will be helpless. The aeroplane can do more varieties of mischief than any other weapon. I can think about in 24 hours."

"I repeat again, I want these aeroplanes and I am going to have them. I see a marvelous development during the next 12 months."

Gen. Allen, who left for Washington, made this announcement in discussing his plans for the development of the aeronautical section of the United States army.

"I want 1000 aeroplanes in the military service of our country within the next three years," said Gen. Allen, "and what is more I am going to have them."

Ask Your Doctor

You may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says.
